FROM THE EDITOR!
"UNSPOKEN THOUGHTS"

It just gets better and better! Obama says that the job market is improving. Romney says that the job market is getting worse. Everyone in the media is jumping on every statement that they think they can manipulate to make it a headliner on the evening news. I don't think that any of the elected officials and wana-bees have any idea what it is like to spend even one day in a working mans shoes. In all fairness, Romney has worked his way up the ladder, but does he really remember those hard times clearly anymore? It seems to me that once a person reaches a certain comfort zone that the reality of the hard times is lessened because of time that has passed. I know that many of the Mom and Pop stores that have survived so far are now on shaky ground, and probably won't make it much longer. When these people loose their businesses they don't fall into the category of the unemployed. They are in limbo. They might survive if they have managed to put away a small savings. The true unemployment numbers are 2 to 3 times higher in reality than what is reported. Society has become nothing more than haves and have not's. The main problem is that Government still insists on overspending, and refuses to admit it. The Federal Reserve this week is going to dump Billions into the economy every month for the next 12 months. This is to kick start the creation of new jobs. Personally I don't buy it for a minute. The same people who have led us down the path to destruction are the same ones in charge of the purse strings. Building more roads and bridges are great for the people that have jobs building roads and bridges. That mud pie that the little girl next door made when we were children is looking tastier and tastier.

I would like to hear your thoughts 760-298-0902
